The sample of this study took a level of 25% of the population, namely 117 students. The data analysis technique used descriptive analysis and multiple regression analysis with analysis prerequisite tests including normality test, heteroscedasticity test and multicollinearity test. Data analysis using SPSS 25.0 for windows program.

The results showed that the relationship between self-efficacy and self-esteem had a negative and not significant relationship, namely -0,045 and 0.659. There is a positive and significant relationship between self-esteem and academic procrastination, namely 0.260 and 0.000. There is a positive and significant relationship between self-efficacy and academic procrastination, namely 0.248 and 0.000. There is a simultaneous relationship between self-esteem and self-efficacy on academic procrastination in a positive and significant way, where the F_{count} value is $13,413 > F_{table}$ value at the 5% significance level, which is 3.08 and the significance is $0.000 > 0.05$, which means the Self-Esteem variable and Self-Efficacy has an effect on academic procrastination. Self-Efficacy And Self-Esteem accounted for 19.0% influence on students' academic procrastination behavior
