Keywords: cultural festivals, religious values, social values

Cultural festivals are a series of positive activity processes conducted in certain areas to maintain and preserve local and national culture. They are held to include the participation of the community, related parties, and the government together. The process of implementing the cultural festival is expected that it will be able to demonstrate the implementation and development of values as local wisdom of religional culture, especially religious and social values.

This research aims to identify the process of implementing the Gosari cultural festival, the values developed in the process of the Gosari cultural festival, and the role of the Gosari cultural festival in the development of religious and social values. This research was a type of qualitative research conducted in Gosari Vilage, Ujungpangkah District, Gresik Regency. Data sources were obtained from the Village Head, Chief Executive, Head of WAGOS Board (Gosari Natural Tourism), religious, and community leaders, and supported by documents and archives.

Data collection was conducted through interviews, observation, and documentation techniques. The research findings showed that the Gosari cultural festival is held once a year with a series of activities which include: Resik Sendang (cleaning the bathing place), Kirab Warga (mutually cleaning the environment), Ngadusi Rojo Koyo (bathing the cows), Traditional Snacks Market, review of the book: "History and Mythology of Gosari", Performance of Traditional Dance and Ludruk Art. The values developed in the implementation process are social, religious, and traditional values. Cultural festivals play a role in developing religious and social values, namely through the optimization in the field of education which is collaborative with nature, and the habituation of community traditions which are held regularly and continuously.
