Students still have to follow government policies to carry out online lectures. Online classes require high independence and self-study abilities, such as the face-to-face learning process not taking place such as learning time problems, lack of concentration and loss of focus, as well as the lack of students' understanding of the learning material provided by the subject teacher. Implementation of online learning is a must so that educational activities can still be carried out during the current Covid-19 pandemic.

Then after being obtained the researcher conducted data analysis by observing the results, presenting the data, and drawing conclusions.
