

ABSTRACT

Kastar, Della Derayanawati. 2020. Gender Language Features In EFL Students' Conversational Practice in SMAN 15 Surabaya. Undergraduate Thesis. English Education Department. Faculty of Teacher Training and education. University of PGRI Adi Buana Surabaya. Advisors: Dr. Dyah Rochmawati, M.Pd.

Keywords: Gender Language Features, Conversation

The purpose of the study was to describe and analysis about the gender language features which implemented for X grades at SMAN 15 Surabaya. In students' conversational practice, there are some differences of gender language features that can be seen.

The researcher used descriptive qualitative. The data on this study are the gender language features found in EFL students' conversational practices and the source of the data was teaching of speaking activities in students of Senior High School. The researcher collected the data from participant observation, making transcription from the recording, taking data and put it into table.

The result of the study that is from the participant observation the observed answers that researcher had been observed the gender language features and there is some of differences gender language features between male and female depend on the topic.